MIRANDA MAKES PEACE

A YEAR AFTER HER QUICKIE DIVORCE FROM BLAKE SHELTON,
MIRANDA
LAMBERT HAS FINALLY COME TO
TERMS WITH HER ROLE IN THEIR SPLIT... AND EVEN SOUGHT HER EX'S FORGIVENESS!

When Miranda Lambert announced her split from husband Blake Shelton almost exactly one year ago, many of her fans (excitedly) assumed that an angry, tell-all album would be forthcoming. Instead, the country music star — whose back catalog of vengeful breakup hits includes classics such as “Kerosene,” “Crazy Ex-Girlfriend” and “Gunpowder and Lead” — has stayed relatively quiet. Last November, just as Blake, 40, and his new girlfriend, Gwen Stefani, were going public with their affair, Miranda admitted, mildly, in an interview, “Man, this sucks right now.”

She wasn’t referring just to the pain of watching a former love move on. “It’s taken some time, but Miranda has finally realized that she bears a lot of responsibility for the demise of her marriage,” a source explains. “She was wracked with guilt for a while.” Her rep denies the story, but a closer look reveals it’s easy to see why Miranda, 32, felt that she had a few things to atone for.

CHEATERS NEVER PROSPER

Miranda’s approach to fidelity was long rumored to have been somewhat... relaxed. Yes, Blake was accused of cheating too, but the list of dudes who Miranda

FLAUNTING THEIR LOVE

FOR MUCH OF THE PAST YEAR, MIRANDA HAS TAKEN BLAKE AND GWEN'S OVER-THE-TOP PDA PERSONALLY, AND IT'S EASY TO SEE WHY: THEY'RE NOT PARTICULARLY SUBTLE!

TRYING TO WORK IT OUT

Since December, Miranda has been dating Anderson East, a 28-year-old R&B singer she met after attending one of his concerts. (She's since jumped onstage with him at least once, no surprise.) But disparate tour itineraries have conspired to keep them apart through the fall, and a source says their relationship may not survive.

reportedly had flings with is long and includes several men — fellow performers and employees — with whom she's been on tour. (See sidebar for a partial rundown.)

“Recently, she's admitted to a few friends that she messed up,” the source claims. And while Miranda “doesn't want to use drinking as an excuse,” the source notes, the hard-charging star “does think that alcohol played a part in her behavior. She's cut way back.”

She also feels bad, the source says,

for having talked smack about Blake's PDA-heavy romance with Gwen, both in private and in public. “I really believe in leaving some mystery,” she told a reporter in May, in one typical swipe, referring to the new couple's propensity to share their love on social media. “I don't need to know what everybody's doing all the time.”

APOLOGY TOUR

Now, though, Miranda sees the error of her ways, and has taken a gentler tone about the pair among friends... hopeful that her chastened words will trickle back to her ex. “She really wants Blake to know she's sorry,” the source says. “She knows that he deserves to move on and be treated well, and she doesn't want to hold him back. She wants the best for him.”

As the one-year anniversary of their split approached, in fact, “Miranda felt poisoned by the bad karma between them and wanted to move forward with positivity.” She's even written a conciliatory note to Blake's mother, Dorothy, with whom she's been out of touch since the divorce. “She doesn't need Blake's family's forgiveness,” the source explains, “but they appreciate her effort — especially Blake.”

FREE AND FOCUSED

Perhaps Miranda's hoping that her clean conscience will help her ensure that her current relationship, with singer Anderson East, doesn't end the same way as her marriage. Together since December, the duo are facing a lot of time apart, as he's opening for the Dixie Chicks and she's getting ready to head out on the road with Kenny Chesney. “All that separation is hard,” the source says. “She's worried.”

But even if her romance doesn't work out, it seems that Miranda is in a better place, happy with herself and secure in what she's looking for. As she told a reporter last fall, “I had a great relationship with an amazing man, so I know what good is. I have a great launching pad for the future. I will never take that for granted.”

MIRANDA'S OTHER MEN

SHE'S LONG BEEN SUSPECTED OF RUNNING AROUND BEHIND BLAKE'S BACK — THESE ARE JUST A FEW OF HER RUMORED FLINGS

JAMEY JOHNSON

Miranda was accused of bunking down on a tour bus with singer Jamey — one of Blake's best friends — back in 2007.

JOSH BECKETT

She's also said to have carried on with (married) Major League Baseball player Josh, right up until the day she wed Blake in 2011.

CHRIS YOUNG

Her close relationship with singer Chris, with whom she's toured, reportedly prompted Blake to finally end their marriage.
